Now for something different.

5. Some people say that reforms to state government are needed in order to stop gridlock on major issues facing the state like the state budget, education, jobs and taxes. To create these reforms, some have suggested convening a California Constitutional Convention, made up of citizens, that would recommend specific changes to government. The voters of California would then vote on whether or not to adopt the reforms. Do you support or oppose calling a constitutional convention to reform California government, or are you undecided?

[IF DECIDED, ASK: And do you [support/oppose] it strongly or not strongly?]
